Striving for personal excellence in the service of others

“With my personal ecumenism, because I can’t do anything else without compromising my faith, I will tell you that I have the truth. However, I want you to know that I respect your faith and your beliefs. And with God’s help I’d lay down my life to defend the freedom of your conscience.” ~ St. Josemaría Escrivá

Letter from the President

It’s four in the afternoon. I open the pantry. The possibilities are endless. I can cook chicken, beef, pork, or fish. I can cook American, Italian, or Tex-Mex. I can grab a recipe from online or pull out my grandmother’s cookbook. I am free to cook anything that I want. But the one thing I cannot do is cook nothing. I cannot starve my family. And no one can force me to starve my family (no exceptions). Neither should anyone prohibit me from feeding my family (one exception), unless the public order requires it. As a human being, I have a duty by my nature to seek the truth and once found, adhere to it. I should not be forced to act against the truth or prohibited from living the truth. These are the foundational principles of freedom of conscience. Just some food for thought... Wishing you a happy Independence Day!

Family Enrichment of Los Angeles (FELA)

Last May, an excellent opportunity was opened for parents to participate in the Leaders Training Conference organized by Family Enrichment of Los Angeles (FELA) whose goal is to strengthen families here and through out the world.

FELA is a non-profit organization dedicated to supporting families by helping parents develop their abilities to raise their children through a positive approach to the demands of their non-deferrable mission, the rearing of their children.

At the conference participants learn about the case study method and the content of the courses that are offered through Family Enrichment. The courses aim at helping parents acquire the tools to foster objective thinking about family life. All the courses give importance to the communication between spouses, helping them differentiate important issues from secondary matters.

Dora del Hoyo

On June 18th, 2012, eight years after her death, Bishop Javier Echevarría presided at the opening of the canonical process on the life and virtues of Dora del Hoyo, the first numerary assistant in Opus Dei. During the ceremony, the Prelate said: "I am more and more convinced of the fundamental role this woman has had and will have in the life of the Church and society. God called Dora del Hoyo to work in tasks similar to those carried out by our Lady in the home at Nazareth." "The Christian example and fidelity of this woman," he continued, "will help strengthen the ideal of a spirit of service and spread in our society the importance of the family, a true domestic church, which she incarnated in her daily generous and cheerful work." Feast of St. Josemaría Escrivá

We were very happy to meet many of you and your families at the Mass for the feast of Saint Josemaría Saturday, June 23, at Our Lady of the Angels Cathedral. The main celebrant was Archbishop Jose Gomez who encouraged all of us to experience the care of our Father God through ordinary occurrences. He also recalled other aspects of the message entrusted to St Josemaría such as love for freedom and the call to work in union with the sacrifice of Christ on the Cross and with a desire to serve others and help them meet God through our personal friendship.

High School Activities

Walnut Grove has been bustling with high school activities for the past few months! Starting out with a Valentine's Day Seminar on Dating given by the dynamic duo Lauren and Ashton Ellis and college student, Carolina McNicoll. They each gave their perspective and advice on how to navigate the dating world in a climate that seems to have lost the true meaning and purpose of dating.

We also completed two Pathfinder Camp training days: one in February, and the other in April for the high school counselors. They learned how to become leaders and role models for their future campers and how to prepare catechism classes and role play difficult situations they may encounter when on the job this summer! We hope to see some of you on the last day of camp this July for the family Mass and show.

Last but not had our Junior 8th and 9th which was Holy week. did a great cleaning Grove!
